

Seminar

Basics of Combined Transport
Rail – Road – Waterways

Personal in your region

What will be done?

The seminar offers a unique opportunity to learn the basics of combined transport (CT) in a compact format and to exchange ideas with other participants. Experienced lecturers provide a sound understanding of this economical and sustainable transport solution.

Seminar contents:

- Basic concepts of combined transport
- Division of labour between operators, railway companies, logistics providers, freight forwarders and shippers
- Framework conditions for CT, such as vehicle tax relief or an increased total weight of 44 tonnes
- Financial subsidies for transport companies.
- Combined transport technology, such as standardisation, combined transport loading units, railway wagons, dimensions and weights
- Transshipment stations, technologies and operating modes
- Transport/market development, in particular business models and brief profiles of market participants
- Benefits of combined transport for transporters based on checklists

Questions are welcome and will be answered during the seminar.

Seminar schedule:

A joint dinner on the first day also provides an informal platform for networking and exchanging ideas. In addition, we offer a visit to a transshipment terminal to experience the practical side of things first-hand and deepen the theoretical understanding of combined transport gained in the seminar.

For whom?

The CT basics seminar is aimed at both beginners who want to take their first steps in the field of CT and advanced learners who want to deepen their knowledge and keep it up to date. These include, among others:

Target Groups:

- Companies that are already active in combined transport but need support in introducing new staff to the exciting and complex world of combined transport.
- Employees who want to update their knowledge of combined transport in order to optimise their working methods and familiarise themselves with the latest developments.
- Decision-makers in companies who recognise the potential of combined transport for their transport logistics in order to strengthen their competitiveness;
- Companies that are not yet familiar with the topic of combined transport and need an introduction;
- Trainees who want to deepen their knowledge of combined transport in order to develop further in this area;
- People from other areas of the transport and logistics industry who want to acquire knowledge about combined transport.
